TANZANIA

Another African country which our travelling members of the House of Assembly visited was Tanzania. And it was well that they did. Tanzania is easily compared with New Guinea.

The name Tanzania is made up of the first part of Tanganyika and the first part of Zanzibar - something like combining Papua and New Guinea into Pagini, as some people here want to do.

Tanzania lies on the East side of Africa, about as far north of the equator as we are. Like Niugini it has a hot coastal plain but much more high flat plateau area something like our Baiyer River valley.

The country is four times bigger than Niugini; but its population is about the same as Niugini's: about 25 persons to the square mile.

There are several similarities between Tanzania and Niugini. Both were ruled by the Germans between 1885 and 1918. Then both belonged to the United Nations. Tanzania like Niugini has one common pidgin language called Swahili which is spoken by all of the 120 tribes in the country. Along with English it is the official language of the country. Tanzania also has a one house legislature like we have here. Their National Assembly has 95 seats, just one more than our House of Assembly.

They have a presidential form of government, not the Westminster type. Dr. Julius Nyerere has been president from the beginning of independence for the Republic in 1960. In 1964 the country Tanganyika (as it was then called) joined with the small offshore island of Zanzibar to form Tanzania.

In still another way Niugini is like Tanzania, in that most of its people live on small farms and do not work for wages. Both countries are great coffee producers. Tanzania also grows much tea and a grass called sisal which is used for making ropes and bags. Under the earth Tanzania has some of the largest diamond mines in Africa; we are still discovering what we have under the ground in Niugini: gold, copper, oil.....who knows?

There are some ways in which New Guinea is ahead of Tanzania. We have a much larger and better school system and health service. And still it is strange that in that big country they have eight daily newspapers and twenty monthly magazines. We have only one daily newspaper in Niugini.

Tanzania has a rare form of government: it has only one party called TANU, which means Tanganyika African National Association. The people are worried about this, they fear they might lose their freedom.

Politically Tanzania came ahead very fast. The first election was in 1958. Within two years the TANU party won 70 of the 71 seats in the government. It took control and immediately said it would grant self-government within two months and independence within eight. And it did!

Money For Pigs

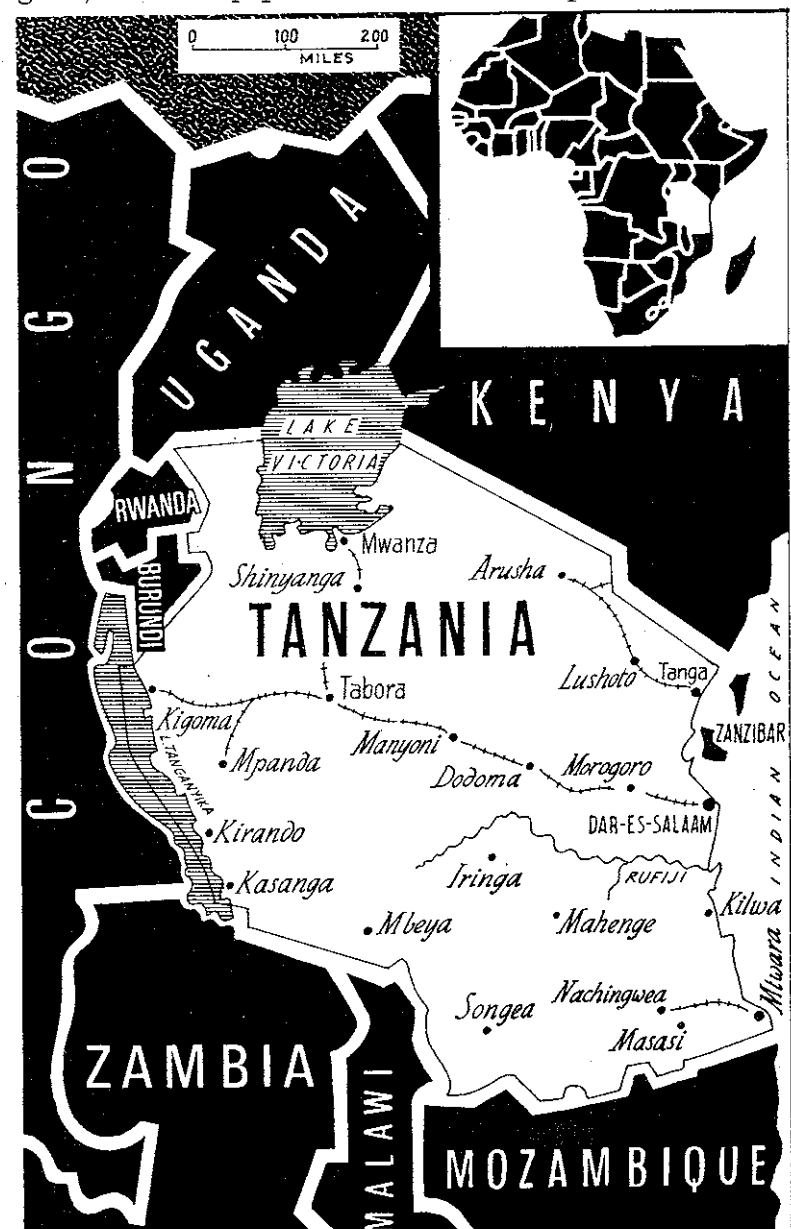

Three young men from Kamaliki Vocational School in the Eastern Highlands District have borrowed money from the Niugini Development Bank to start piggery businesses.

The men are Filehe Hupa, Keta Nebesi and David Amero who all come from Loza Village.

The Headmaster of Kamaliki Vocational School,

Mr Stewart, said that the three young men had each borrowed $100 and they will use this money to buy 12 pigs.

Mr Stewart said the young men had attended Kamaliki School where they studied the basic principles of pig keeping. The school is now helping them start their piggery businesses on their own land near the school.

BELGIUM

Every issue of Wantok will have the story of a country in English. Today's country is Belgium. On the map at the top of the page you can see where Belgium is in relation to New Guinea - both are marked in black.

Belgium is in the centre of Europe, bordered by France, Germany, Spain, Denmark and the Netherlands (or Holland).

It is a small country compared with New Guinea but it is a wealthy one. There are more than nine million people spread over the 11,770 square miles of land.

Belgium has a variety of scenery. It has varied and intensive agriculture, big cities and thickly populated countryside. It has its own ports, Antwerp being one of the main ports of the world. The capital is Brussels.

The Belgian are very friendly people, who like good food, comfort and sports. Some of their favourite sports are soccer, basketball, swimming, fishing and boating. They like their freedom, and they are business-like.

Belgium is a very rich country. It has minerals such as coal and iron ore. The economy is based on exports of industrial products, such as metals, machinery, machine tools, glassware, chemicals and diamonds. It exports about 40% of its industrial output. It has no natural resources of its own and has to purchase essential raw materials such as coal, clay, sand and stone abroad. It is one of the world's main exporters of non-ferrous metals.

The powers of the nation are represented by the Parliament. The members of the House of Representatives are elected by both men and women of 21 years of age.

This is done secretly on paper by each person voting for the person he approves. There is a king but he does not rule. This means he appoints and dismisses his ministers, but his ministers are responsible and no act of the king is effective unless it is countersigned by a minister.

Most Belgian homes, are small but comfortable. Everyday dress is simple as it is in most European countries. The men wear wooden shoes to keep their feet dry in this wet farming country. On very special occasions such as festivals, the people wear special costumes. Belgium is a good holiday place for visitors from other countries.

OFF TO ENGLAND

A Papuan head teacher leaves the Territory in September for England. He will attend a twelve months' course at the University of Oxford's Department of Educational Studies. He is Mr Madi Roua of Kila Kila village near Port Moresby. Mr Madi has been teaching for 18 years and has been head teacher at a primary school in Marshall Lagoon for 4 years.

POPULATION GROWS:

Australia's population was 12,446,000 at December 31, 1969. This is an increase of more than 270,000 over the 1968 population. In four years the population has risen by almost 1,000,000 from 11,505,000 in 1965 to 12,446,000 in 1969.

Self - Help

(New Guinea News Service)

The Australian Administration here is trying to encourage Niugini's 18 District to do more themselves, especially in education, land, and local government.

The new Administrator, Mr. L.W. Johnson, has already said that the Territory's 146 local government councils will be given more power and local control, as soon as they show they can handle more power.

In addition, District Education Boards set up as part of the new, unified education system will contain two representatives of local government councils in each District.

Mr. Johnson says that a new Land Law to be talked about in August and November by the House of Assembly, will allow the House to establish a Land Board in each District, to look after many things dealing with land: sales, leasing, development. Members of local government councils will also be members of the District Land Boards.

HIDING IN BUSH NEAR BORDER

(New Guinea News Service)

Village people who do not want to work with the Indonesians, are still hiding in the bush near the border with Niugini, according to a broadcast by Radio Merauke.

Indonesian Government officials in the West Irian capital, Djajapura, said the people were hiding near Arso, in West Irian, about eight miles from the border with the West Sepik District. Since 1963, many hundreds of West Irian village people have walked through Arso to cross the border into New Guinea at Sekotiau, near Pagei Patrol Post.

Radio Merauke said the Indonesian Government wanted the people near Arso to come out of the bush, and help the Indonesians develop West Irian properly.

WEST IRIAN GRANT:

West Irian has received $23½ million from the Indonesian Government in an annual development grant to June 1971. This is $5 million more than West Irian received last year. Last year Niugini needed $175 million to run the country. $100 million of this came from the Australian Government.

LONGEST BRIDGE:

The longest bridge in Niugini is to be built across the Markham River near Lae. It will be 610 yards long, and built of steel and concrete. The reason for building the bridge so long is because the Markham River at times of flood can become a quater of a mile wide.

Guinea and Indonesian took over, nearly 300 men, women and children from West Irian have been allowed to stay in New Guinea. They are called refugees. About 4,000 other people from West Irian were made to go back across the border into West Irian. (N.G.N.S.)
