Cath Labs: Listening to the rhythm of the beat

The Cath Lab of PIH

A Cath lab is a laboratory that conducts tests and procedures that assess how well the heart is functioning. During the Cardiac Catheterization, a Catheter (a flexible tube inserted through a narrow opening into a body cavity to remove fluid) is inserted into a large blood vessel that leads to your heart and in the lab - procedures and tests include ablation (a procedure where the electrical activity in your heart is recorded), angiogram (a process where a series of x-rays are created to find the blockage in the arteries), and implantation of pacemakers. Unlike operations that take place in an operating theatre, you will be awake for the duration of the procedure.

What Is Coronary Angioplasty?

Your heart's arteries can become blocked or narrowed from a buildup of cholesterol, cells or other substances (plaque). This can reduce blood flow to your heart and cause chest discomfort. Sometimes a blood clot can suddenly form or get worse and completely block blood flow, leading to a heart attack.

Angioplasty opens blocked arteries and restores normal blood flow to your heart muscle. It is not major surgery. It is done by threading a catheter (thin tube) through a small puncture in a leg or arm artery to the heart. The blocked artery is opened by inflating a tiny balloon in it.

With coronary angioplasty, a thin, expandable balloon is inserted into the clogged artery and is inflated. This opens the artery by pushing the plaque against the artery wall. The balloon is then removed and blood flows more easily through the artery.

1. Preparation

Prior to entering the Cath Lab, you will change into a gown and a cannula will be inserted into your arm. The doctor will explain the procedure to you and you will have to sign the consent form and then lie on the x-ray table for thirty minutes. An ECG machine will be connected to you to measure your heart rhythm. In case you are required to be asleep during the procedure then a general anesthetic will be administered to you.

2. Procedure

Depending on the procedure, the skin at your groin or collarbone or neck will be cleaned with a special solution, then a local anesthetic will be administered and the Cannula will be inserted using a specific vein or an artery that leads to your heart. The Cannula is guided with the help of the x-ray.

3. Post procedure

Once the procedure is completed the catheter is removed. Based on the operation, you will be asked to lie down for a short span of time. In case you have an angioplasty, ablation or pacemaker implantation, you can be relieved from the hospital on the same day. In case an angioplasty was conducted for a heart attack, then the duration of the stay in the hospital will increase.

Process of an Angiogram

An Angiogram utilizes a special dye and camera to take pictures of the blood flow in an artery or a vein. This dye is passed through the catheter and after several x-rays, the dye will mark out the areas where the arteries are blocked on the x-ray.

Process of an Angioplasty

An Angioplasty is an endovascular procedure used to open blocked sections of the artery. At one end of the catheter there is a balloon which is slowly inflated to squeeze out the fatty deposits on the artery wall, thereby allowing the blood to flow easily through the arteries. If required, a stent is inserted to strengthen the artery walls.

After the surgery, you must eat and drink fluids to flush out the dye from your body. Based on the type of surgery that you had undertaken you will be discharged. There are a few cases where a surgeon has to repair the hole where the catheter was attached to the patient and the substance used to fix the whole is absorbed in time. There are no after effects of the Cardiac Cath and it is a safe practice which is performed regularly.

PIH is Port Moresby's largest private hospital offering more than 14 specialities under one roof, with specialists and technologically advanced equipments being utilized to bring modern healthcare to PNG. PIH is the only hospital in Papua New Guinea to set up a fully functional tertiary care unit especially for Cardiac Care. The doctors and cardiac surgeons of PIH have conducted several successful open heart surgeries and angioplasties and helped many afflicted PNGians.

If you have any further queries about Cath Lab or Angioplasty, please feel free to email us at info@pihpng.com or simply walk in and ask to be shown around the new facility.

Effective Communication is Key to Biodiversity Conservation

IMPROVED AND EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION between stakeholders is key to achieving the government's National Biodiversity Strategic Action Plan targets.

PNG joined the global community to recognize Biodiversity through a number of UN sanctioned conferences which resulted in the signing and ratification of the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD). One of the commitment under CBD is for each country including PNG to develop and implement the National Biodiversity Strategic Action Plan (NBSAP). PNG fulfilled this commitment in 2007 with the launching of the PNG NBSAP.

Unfortunately, implementation of the PNG NBSAP has fallen short of meeting its targets.

Although the Conservation Environment Protection Authority (CEPA) is the lead Government agency for formulation and implementation of NBSAP, CEPA needs the collective efforts of all the stakeholders, other Government Agencies, Private Sector, Non-Government Organizations, Communities and Donors to successfully implement the NBSAP.

Lack of communication between stakeholders was identified as a contributing factor to the failure to achieve the NBSAP targets. To help improve communication between stakeholders, a three-day workshop on communicating conservation practices in PNG was held in March 2016 in Port Moresby. It brought participants from Government Agencies, Private Sectors, Donors, NGOs and local community representatives.

Among other things, the workshop agreed to improve Communication between the stakeholders using a quarterly newsletter of which The Nature Conservancy, PNG Mama Graun Conservation Trust Fund and Sea Web will coordinate and publish.

Sponsored by ExxonMobil PNG Ltd, this was the first of a series of workshops that will eventuate over the coming months. Proceedings from these workshops will form the content of the newsletters that will be widely circulated amongst key stakeholders and interested readers.

“STOP ILLEGAL TRADE IN WILDLIFE”

“ITAMBU LON SALIM OL ENAMEL, BINATANG NA DIWAI BILONG YUMI”

“TANOBADA ENA UDA BONA DAVARA KOHUDIA ITA NARIA NAMONAMO, HOIHOI BONA ABIA KAVA LASI, INAI BE TARAVATU”

Empowered lives. Resilient nations.

Hon. John Pundari, MP
Minister For Environment
Conservation & Climate Change

This year's World Environment Day (WED) Theme is "STOP ILLEGAL TRADE IN WILDLIFE". Since the WED Theme relates to combating illegal trade of our wildlife- this Day is dedicated to spreading awareness to Papua New Guineans and everyone around the world to stop the illegal selling and buying of PNG wildlife and wildlife products which are legally protected and listed under our National Wildlife laws and the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) as endangered species on our planet earth.

In our beautiful country we have animals that have been identified as threatened and are listed under our national wildlife law as Protected Fauna (Fauna (Protection and Control) Act). These species such as the Tree Kangaroos; New Guinea Harpy Eagle; all species of Birds of Paradise, the Leatherback Turtle; all species of Birdwing Butterflies; Blyth's Hornbill and the Victoria Crown Pigeon.

Some of these animals and plants are also listed in CITES as endangered species such as the Black Corals; Manus Green Tree-snails; all species of Marine Turtles; the Pig noise Turtle; Sawfish; and the Queen Alexandra Birdwing Butterfly. It is our responsibility to ensure these wildlife are not being illegally traded locally and across our land and sea borders into another countries. If we are not vigilant we may lose some of our unique wildlife species to complete extinction.

The Government in its wisdom and foresight has approved the transformation of the former Department of Environment and Conservation into the Conservation and Environment Protection Authority (CEPA). This gives CEPA more mandatory powers to enforce various laws and to prosecute offenders both in the regulatory and conservation front in the event these laws are breached. As the PNG Environment Minister I had instructed my organization to work closely with relevant stakeholders to develop and publish the PNG National Protected Area Policy. CEPA is currently working on several implementation strategies which will complement the Protected Area Policy and I am confident we can capture the fight against illegal trade of wildlife.

Wildlife Enforcement is challenging for Papua New Guinea as we share vast land borders with the Republic of Indonesia and seas border with Solomon Islands and Australia. The land border with Indonesia has no border facilities throughout the length of the main island of New Guinea. There are lot of wildlife trade along the border areas which are difficult to regulate and control. We do have similar challenges on the sea- border area as well along Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands. As Papua New Guinea is a party to CITES we have an obligation to report on illegal exports along our borders' and also to confiscate any illegal wildlife traded along these borders. Australian authorities every year confiscate on average ninety specimens of illegal exports (such sea shells, birds feathers etc) from Papua New Guinea into Australian ports without CITES export permits.

In 2015 China Customs reported confiscation of 17 species of live parrots from a logging ship originating from the Southern region of Papua New Guinea. These are grim realities of such illegal wildlife trade happening in our country and around the world- therefore I am appealing to every citizen of these beautiful country to use this occasion to spread the message to stop any form of illegal wildlife trade.

Happy World Environment Day.

Every year on 5 June the world celebrates World Environment Day to create global awareness on environmental issues the world is facing. The 2016 global theme is "Go Wild for Life" and the national theme is to "Stop Illegal Trade in Wildlife".

The international trade of wildlife is governed by the 1973 Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). As a signatory to the Convention, PNG passed the enabling national legislation, Fauna (Protection and Control) Act 1976 and subsequently ratified CITES in 1979. This was necessary to safeguard Papua New Guinea's unique biodiversity in recognition of PNG having the third largest rainforest in the world. This country can boast for its unique flora and fauna and is home to a high level of biodiversity including the nation's pride, the Bird of Paradise as well as the Southern Crown Pigeon- the world's largest pigeon, the Pig Nose Turtle, the Alexander Birdwing Butterfly - the world's largest butterfly and the Tenkile Tree Kangaroo are examples of endangered wildlife in the country. While we can be proud of the vast forests in PNG offering a safe haven for wildlife, growing evidence of illegal trade in wildlife globally highlights that PNG is not immune to such exploitation. Ongoing illegal trading directly threatens conservation efforts. This should be of concern for Papua New Guinea as the booming illegal trade in wildlife products can potentially erode our precious biodiversity, robbing us of our natural heritage and driving whole species to the brink of extinction. Bio-security concerns is also a priority for any government to safeguard the health and welfare of its people and wildlife. Absence of effective controls can threaten safety of our people including potential loss of culture and tradition. We recognize that effective administration of CITES legislation in PNG is critical to ensuring sustainable levels of trading and maintaining species populations. Local action to combat illegal capture and or killing and smuggling of wildlife will undermine economies, threaten ecosystems, fuel organized crime and feeding corruption and insecurity across the globe.

This World Environment Day theme seeks to re-enforce messages of the importance of protecting our wildlife and the trade in endangered species and the need to strictly adhere to regulated levels of wildlife trading. While we reach out to empower our people, we must also acknowledge the many agents mandated to enforce this trade and commend them for their ongoing efforts to protect our borders. This global threat on species can only be addressed when we realize our role to be active agents managing wildlife to serve human development; this is of paramount importance and can take place when we fully respect the network of life and our role.

I'd like to commend the government for its first ever national Protected Areas Policy approved by NEC in 2014 supported by the United Nations Development Programme. This outlines policy options to be supported by an improved legal framework to improve protection and management of wildlife in Papua New Guinea. The policy is complementary to international standards of biodiversity protection. As we move towards developing enabling legislation, we acknowledge that a concerted effort is necessary amongst civil society, development partners and the PNG Government to support and improve. With this international support to tackling illegal wildlife trade also requires scaling up local efforts to help the isolated, marginalized groups and vulnerable communities invest and adapt sustainable wildlife trade, where opportunities can be derived to improve livelihoods, ensure our people benefit.

Growing number of PNG civil society organizations are gaining recognition at the global level for their contribution to environmental conservation, poverty reduction and climate action. Five PNG organizations received UNDP's global Equator Award – a big success for the country. Sepik Wetlands Management Initiative was marked for its outstanding efforts in restoring the crocodile population from declining status to an improved stock during the last decade. Community members of the Wanang Conservation Area were also recognized for their outstanding efforts in environmental conservation. They teamed up to protect more than 10 000 of hectares of forest from logging activities. These examples show the growing leadership and commitment PNG is taking on protecting its environment. It also shows that all of us - communities, partners, governments, and civil society organizations have the capacity to make a difference in protecting our environment, and by doing so – create a better future for all.

1:00 pm	END of 2016 WED Program

In the year 1972, the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment was held on 5- 16 June in Stockholm, Sweden. During that meeting the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP) was formed and the 5 of June was set aside as the World Environment Day. Since then World Environment Day is now celebrated every year on 5 June around the world with different countries hosting annual themes to mark the day.

The purpose for WED is to raise awareness about environmental issues and threats facing our planet earth and to galvanize support from governments, organizations and individuals to focus on these issues and threats and think of innovative ways and means to address them.

This year's WED Theme is 'Stop Illegal Trade in Wildlife' and this year's host country for world environment day is Angola, a country that is seeking to restore its elephant herds, conserve Africa's biodiversity-rich wildlife and safeguard the environment as it continues to rebuild after more than a quarter of a century of civil war. We as a country can pledge our support and join the Global community to fight against the illegal trade in wildlife.

This simply means we should not buy or sell animals that are on the CITES list of endangered species. In Papua New Guinea we do have some animal species which falls under the CITES categories as endangered species which include Tree Kangaroos, Birds of Paradise, Birdwing Butterflies and others.

This are animals we must avoid trading them illegally. However if we have to trade them than we have to comply with requirements of the CITES and other national and international laws and conventions to ensure that trade is done on fair terms and our wildlife are not overly exploited or even worse brought to extinction.

WED can be celebrated in many different ways: through arts and crafts exhibitions, film festivals, competitions, demonstration activities, drama and poetry, online and social media activities, sports and so on. Certain organizations both private and government as well as schools plan activities to celebrate this day and I do acknowledge your efforts to promote the World Environment Day in your own ways.

The take-home message is that the fight against illegal trade of our unique wildlife should be a collective effort and we all should make it our business to take up this challenge so that together we can stop this unlawful activity.

Happy World Environment Day to you all and do enjoy the day's celebration.
